CPI.

A Commercial Pilot License (CPL) is a license that allows a person to fly an aircraft for compensation or hire. It is a more advanced pilot license than a Private Pilot License (PPL) and requires additional training and experience.

To obtain a CPL, one must meet certain requirements set by their country's aviation authority. In India you are required to have a minimum 200 hours of flight training, including a certain number of hours of cross-country flying, night flying, and instrument flying. The candidate must also pass 6 written exams, a flight test, and two medical examinations.

Once a person has a CPL, they can fly as a professional pilot for a variety of purposes, such as airline transport, corporate aviation, or aerial photography. They can also continue to advance their pilot career and obtain additional ratings and certifications, such as a multi-engine rating or an Airline Transport Pilot (ATP) license.

ATPL

ATPL/ATP is short for Airline Transport Pilot License/ Airline Transport Pilot. It can only be achieved after CPL. After working as a First Officer/ Co-pilot, you would want to become the Captain or the Pilot in Command.

To become the Captain, you need to clear the additional DGCA exams for ATPL and you need to have a flying experience of a minimum of 1500hrs.

Once you enroll with Saurabh Jain Aviator Academy, you will be trained for ATPL exams as well without any extra cost. Yes, you heard it right, you can attend as many Ground Classes as you want until you achieve ATPL.
